LaRoy Thompson, Treas.

Young (38) and able LaRoy B. Thompson, Associate Treasurer of the University since 1957, is the new Vice President and Treasurer of the University as successor to Raymond L. Thompson (no relation), who retired on June 30 after serving the institution for 32 years.

For the past two years, LaRoy Thompson has worked directly with Raymond Thompson in directing the University's financial policy. The annual budget for operating the educational, research and related programs is well over $22 million, and the physical assets are estimated at over $52 million.

For this big task, LaRoy Thompson brings to the University a well-rounded background of experience. He first came to Rochester in 1946 as engineer and business manager of the 130-inch Cyclotron Laboratory, going to Cornell University in 1948 as engineer and research assistant in the Physics Department. The next year he returned to The University of Rochester as Coordinator of Sponsored Research. He was named Director of Research Administration in 1954, and continued in that important position until last January, when he was succeeded by David A. McBride, Jr.

Under Mr. Thompson's leadership, the amount of sponsored research at the University doubled, rising from nearly $3 million in 1949 to nearly $6 million this year.

He is a trustee and former chairman of the board of Associated Universities, Inc., an association of nine universities which operates Brookhaven National Laboratory under contract with the Atomic Energy Commission, and the National Radio Astronomy Observatory now being built at Green Bank, W. Va., under contract with the National Science Foundation.

A native of Tilton, N.H., and a graduate of Cornell School of Chemical Engineering in 1943, Mr. Thompson was on the staffs of the University of Chicago's Metallurgical Laboratory and the University of California's Los Alamos Laboratory, under the Manhattan Project, during the years 1944-46.

Mr. Thompson is a director of the Rochester Hospital Service Corporation and of Rochester General Hospital.

Board Chairman Retires

For almost half of his entire existence, Raymond N. Ball has been associated with the University of Rochester as student, administrative officer, and member of its Board of Trustees. A graduate of the University in 1941, he first joined its staff in 1919 as Alumni Secretary, became Comptroller in 1923, then Vice President and Treasurer.

He resigned from the latter position in 1929 to become president of the Lincoln Alliance Bank and Trust Company, and has been a University Trustee ever since.

At the annual meeting of the Board on June 5, Mr. Ball resigned as Chairman of the University's Board, but continues as a Trustee.

"The University has been one of Mr. Ball's careers which he has pursued for nearly 50 years," the Rochester Times-Union observed editorially. "To him can be credited more than one man's normal portion in shaping its present day form, substance and standards of excellence..." The presidents, faculty and fellow trustees found him a tower of strength during a great depression, a great war, and a great inflation. The future, however, whatever it may bring, holds fewer perils because of Mr. Ball's dedicated service."

His successor as Chairman of the Board will be elected probably at the September meeting.

At its annual meeting, the Board of Trustees elected three new members, and named three others as Honorary Trustees after many years of faithful service. Elected new Trustees were Kenneth B. Keating, United States Senator from New York, who was graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors from the University in 1919 at the age of 19; Elmer B. Milliman, also of the class of 1919, president of the Central Trust Company, and William S. Vaughn, vice president and general manager of the Eastman Kodak Company.

Named as Honorary Trustees were M. Herbert Eisenhart, who was Chairman of the UR Board from 1945 to 1952, Charles F. Hutchinson, '98, Secretary of the Board since 1947, and Ernest A. Paviour, '10, who was general co-chairman of the University's Development Fund Campaign in 1953.

Samuel S. Stratton, '37, a member of the House of Representatives, who in May was elected an alumni member of the Board for a six-year term, was inducted into the Board at the annual meeting. Mr. Stratton is a member of Congress from the Schenectady district and a former Mayor of Schenectady.

Hinman at Hull

Dr. Robert B. Hinman, a member of the University's English faculty for the past 11 years, will go to the University of Hull, England, for the 1959-60 academic year as R. T. French Professor of English at the British university, under an exchange professorship.
ship between the University of Rochester and Hull. With his wife and two of his three children, Dr. Hinman will sail for England about September 1. The exchange program, financed by the R. T. French Company of Rochester and its associate in England, Reckitt and Colman, Ltd., was established in 1953 and is believed to be a unique cooperative undertaking between industrial firms and universities. Visits from Hull to Rochester take place in alternate years. During the past academic year, Prof. Raymond L. Brett, professor of English at the University of Hull, was R. T. French Professor of English at the UR.

New Faculty Appointments

Five major new appointments on the faculty have been announced. They are:
Dr. Alastair J. Gillies of New Haven, Conn., as Professor of Anesthesiology and Chairman of the Division of Anesthesiology, and Dr. Julius J. Cohen of the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, as Associate Professor of Physiology at the Medical Center; Dr. Thomas R. Knapp, '52, '57G, as Director of the Testing and Counseling Service, as successor to Dr. Joseph W. Cole, now Dean of Students on the River Campus; Miss Anna Kas-kos, teacher of voice at the Eastman School of Music, to replace Miss Josephine Antoine, who joined the faculty in 1957, and Dr. Emil Wolf, of Manchester, England, as Visiting Associate Professor for two years in the Institute of Optics.

Dr. Gillies, son of Dr. John Gillies, one of the foremost teachers of anesthesiology in Great Britain, has been with Dr. Nicholas M. Greene at the Yale University School of Medicine since 1955, as assistant professor of anesthesiology and associate director of the department of anesthesia in the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital in New Haven. He had his collegiate and medical school work in Edin­burgh University, Scotland, and came to the United States in 1951. Dr. Cohen has been associated with the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine since 1953, since 1955 as assistant professor of physiology. He is a graduate of Rutgers University in 1945 and received his M.D. degree at New York University College of Medicine in 1948.

Dr. Knapp, who holds three degrees from the UR, and received his Doctor of Education degree at Harvard in June, also has an appointment as Assistant Professor of Education, part-time. He is a specialist in the field of measurement and statistics.

Miss Kaskos, a former Metropolitan Opera singer, is a contralto who sang leading roles at the Metropolitan and was a featured concert soloist. She has been professor of voice at the University of Florida, and before that was on the staff of the University of Indiana. Miss Antoine, whom she replaces, also a former Metropolitan singer, is giving up her Eastman School post because of her husband's health. He is Edwin Hinkle, a WVET announcer. They will make their home in Phoenix, Ariz., where Miss Antoine will be on the voice faculty of the University of Arizona.

Dr. Wolf, a leading figure in optics research, will direct research which will broaden the University's work in optics through a small research group of post-graduate students and optics scientists which will examine the behavior of light waves and radio waves. The work will be basic, but what is learned may prove of great value in providing a better understanding of the worlds around us. For the past eight years he has worked with Dr. Max Born, winner of the 1954 Nobel Prize in physics.

UR Launches Research for Orbiting Observatory

The University has been awarded some $500,000 in research contracts for the design and construction of an orbiting observatory, Director of the Division for Group Research is Dr. Harold Stewart, (left), seen here with James E. Milligan, (center), head of the Stellar Structure Section of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and Dr. Kenneth Tengarden, (right), Assistant Professor of Optics.

An ambitious project to design and build an orbiting observatory which will form the "heart" of an earth satellite has been undertaken by a new research division recently established by the Institute of Optics.

The basic component will be a rotating telescope designed to observe the universe from 500 miles above the earth, eliminating the interference for viewing and recording equipment created by the atmosphere.

The new Division of Group Research, under the direction of Dr. Harold Stewart, Associate Professor of Optics, will draw on specialists from throughout the University. Although the major work on the space satellite will be done in the optics field, a large contribution, the basic study of outer space to determine the conditions to be met by the high-flying optical equipment, will come from the Department of Physics and Astronomy. The division also includes scientists in engineering, biology, and the Medical School.

Some $500,000 in research contracts, much of it from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, has been awarded to the division. It is anticipated that the satellite will probably be ready for launching sometime in 1967.

If we can agree that one of the major processes involved in becoming an adult is that of learning, it is fruitful to ask how well our society arranges the conditions under which this learning takes place. From many points of view, these conditions violate almost everything we know about optimal learning conditions.

When we consciously label learning as learning, as in such areas as golf or music or industrial skills, we do a much better job. We set up well-marked goals; the paths to these goals are clearly charted; the skills required are analyzed and specified; the learning process is monitored lest the pupil learn wrong responses which will later have to be unlearned; we plan a series of "rewards" to keep motivation high and to keep the learner informed of his progress; we permit only experienced and qualified teachers; we try to keep the learning process free of emotional involvements. We do not expect the learner to become an expert without extensive training and practice and we do not punish, ridicule, reject during this practice period.

In our culture, in contrast to many more simple cultures, we do none of these things in helping the child learn to become an adult. Our culture is changing rapidly. It is a heterogeneous culture where the goals and paths to these goals are different from group to group. It is a culture in which many adults are not at all clear, except in the vaguest sort of way, what constitutes the adult role or when it should be assumed.

To argue that the solution to the adolescent's problem is to change the culture is unrealistic. Certain minor changes might be made but we cannot reduce either the complexity or the heterogeneity. We can, however, recognize the tremendous challenge involved in learning to become an adult. We can treat the adolescent with at least as much understanding as we do when he is learning golf, algebra, or an industrial skill. We can believe in him, help him chart his course, provide him early opportunities to develop independence, responsibility, leadership, responsiveness, and, above all, recognize that the transition to an adult role requires a long period of practice involving faltering steps, errors, discouragement, rapid progress, slow progress, slipping backward, leaping forward, trying one path and then another, emphasizing one goal and then another but, given half a chance, always moving toward the goal. He can learn only by doing. No one else can do his learning for him.
THE ROOM

Reunion-Commencement Weekend started early this year as some 300 alumni became students for the day at the new Alumni Seminars on Friday afternoon, June 5. Dynamic lecturers plus challenging topics added up to stimulating sessions for all...and collectively proved a notable addition to the weekend program. These pages are devoted to excerpts of each of the four lectures.

YOUR MONEY AND THE SOARING SIXTIES
Eric C. Vance
Professor of Business Administration

Many people wonder if this is another 1929. Basically the big bull market of the late 1920's was generated and sustained by a few simple beliefs or maxims: that, thanks to Federal Reserve and other government controls, a major depression couldn't develop, hence the time to buy was whenever you had some money...that common stocks were the thing to buy because they offered protection against inflation plus long-term growth potentialities...that the best stocks to buy were the "blue chips" with the best growth records. (Do any of these maxims sound familiar?)...

Let's reappraise that philosophy of thirty years ago. Clearly it was wrong in assuming there could be no more depressions — and we should be wrong in assuming this today, although there now are many more "built-in" stabilizers and the odds against a big bust appear much better.

Stressing the inflation-protection and long-term growth virtues of good common stocks was logically sound thirty years ago. It is even more so today. It's hard to see how further increases in the cost of living can be prevented. And it's easy to grow quite optimistic about the growth potentialities of the Soaring Sixties. The pace of technological development is accelerating; rising pressure is being exerted by the "growth race" with Russia; and the population upsurge can't help swelling the need for more goods — although it won't lead to an exceptionally rapid rise in the population of working age for some time.

The philosophy of the Twenties assumed that the price you paid wasn't very important, so long as you bought good growth stocks. This was and still is a dangerous attitude. You need to set some price limits, if only to provide a margin of safety against unpredictable economic, political, and international developments.

Whenever you pay substantial premiums for future growth, make sure you have the requisite patience and fortitude. Even when you buy high, you should eventually enjoy substantial appreciation, if you picked the right stocks; and if you don't become discouraged during intervening periods when unexpected events cause investment enthusiasm to wane and prices to sag.

Long-term prospects for the Soaring Sixties appear excellent. They can prove profitable if you bear in mind the lessons of 1928-29...have the patience...and keep some of your money out of the current market on the chance that you may get a better investing opportunity within the next two or three years.
THE SOUTH IN TURMOIL

Richard C. Wade
Associate Professor of History

The old rural South is rapidly disappearing, and the forces of industrialization and urbanization are creating a region that each year looks more and more like the North. The speed of this transformation, however, has brought severe dislocations. Even without the race question the South today would be an area of social upheaval.

The rise of the "new Negro" is the most important and least understood aspect of the contemporary South. This new generation of Negroes is the first one which has had broad unsegregated experience. In the army, in colleges under the G.I. bill, in wide travel, they have come to know a life unconfined by segregation. Ambitious, often talented and educated, the "new Negro" is providing the leadership in the struggle for equal opportunity.

The Supreme Court decision in 1954 did not order the integration of Southern life. It merely ordered the desegregation of public schools. The broad object of the Court's many decisions on race is not to invade the private lives of Southerners, but rather to equalize the public life of that region.

In the long run it is impossible to have a free public educational system without a free political system. For this reason the widening of the franchise in the South is intimately connected with the desegregation of schools. The Negro vote in many of the major cities is already significant; these localities have already indicated that they are ready to desegregate, at least in some degree, as soon as the state legislatures will permit it.

Along with the rest of the Western nations, we now find our values and institutions under the closest scrutiny by a generation of Africans which possesses one great advantage over earlier ones. It cannot, in the main, be compelled to accept or made to keep what it does not like or cannot use. Thus the West can no longer successfully employ force to gain acceptance of its way of life or its will and must, moreover, take its chances in competition with what Asia, the Soviet Union, and others have to offer.

What choice of political and economic systems and cultural values Africans will make must, from the point of view of the West, still be more a matter of hope than of certainty. Meanwhile it will do us no good to be fidgety or frantic. African decisions are likely to be governed by the past as well as the present experience of Africa with the West and by the extent to which what the West offers is compatible with African culture and expectation.

The West will do well to remember that the African has above all a passionate need and desire to be himself and to be accepted for himself. He cannot be a replica of alien cultures and still be an African. He must become whatever destiny and his own particular genius decree.

A First for Buffalo

The 1959-60 Alumni Campaign of the University of Rochester Fund got off to an early start with the receipt of a check in the amount of $300 from the University of Rochester Alumni Club of Buffalo. This gift marks the first time a federated alumni club has made an unrestricted contribution to an annual fund campaign. The Buffalo gift represents a portion of the profits realized when the club sponsored a public concert by the UR Glee Club at the Kenmore High School this past spring.
